Happy New Year

Welcome back!

We all want our children to think about others and do positive things for them. It's easy for kids to concentrate on their own needs and forget that those they care about have needs too. That's where parents and adults can help. We can encourage our children to be more aware of how they relate to others and how to feel good about their actions. The words we choose, the tone of our voices and other nonverbal cues we send contribute to the message of kindness. Please, thank you, you're welcome: encouraging statements made to others convey a feeling that brings us close together.

Science & Geography: Asia— animals, maps, food, traditions and flags.

Unit Study: Cooking! This month we are going to use some creativity with our cooking skills. Activities will include learning measuring terms, safety and health, pictorial presentations for recipes, weekly cookie bake and designing aprons to take home.
